AUTHOR'S BIOGRAPHY

Puji Hastuti is a researcher at the Center for Population, BRIN. She holds an anthropology background from Universitas Indonesia and has been engaged in research on the Agabag community since 2012 until the present. The first manuscript about Agabag was published as her bachelor thesis in 2014 and master thesis in 2023. Her writings on the life of the Agabag community on national borders have also been presented in various international academic forums such as the 2nd ICSSH 2018 with the title "Local Population Mobility at State Borders: Negotiations on Community State Boundaries in Hulu Sembakung", ALTER SEA Conference 2021 with the title "State Sovereignty and The Rupture of Mamatik Tradition Among Indigenous People in Borneo", and the 1st ICBA 2020 with the article title "Ethnic Interaction in the Upper Sembakung River, North Borneo Kalimantan: Forbidden Strategies of Border Communities toward Territorial Concentration of State". Her popular essay on one of Agabag's special crafts, published at CTSS IPB website. In 2022, Puji published a journal article about the Agabag community titled Ethno-demographic of Semiotics and gender perspective: Case of Community in Upper Sembakung, North Kalimantan. For correspondence, Puji Hastuti can be contacted via email at pujisht@gmail.com and puji013@brin.go.id

Sheila Devi Michael is a senior lecturer at the Department of International and Strategic Studies at the Faculty of Arts and Social Sciences, Universiti Malaya. Dr Michael's PhD research was on Human Trafficking in Malaysia and later was published in a book. Her main research interests include migration, human trafficking and the smuggling of migrants, and human rights and she has a keen interest in delving into non-traditional security issues troubling the region. Currently, she is exploring irregular migration and child trafficking through the lens of socio-economy.

Kriselle Marie Calica Aquino is a graduate student of the Asia-Pacific Master of Arts in Human Rights and Democratization (APMA) at the Institute of Human Rights and Peace Studies, Mahidol University and Kathmandu School of Law. She holds a bachelor's degree in Communication from the University of the Philippines, with her first indigenous-related research on the artifactual communication of Cordilleran indigenous material culture. For nearly a decade, her work has been mainly about the Philippine peace process, particularly in the fields of transitional justice, peacebuilding, and conflict transformation. She is an advocate for human rights from the periphery particularly minoritized ethnic groups and vulnerable sectors in post-conflict contexts, an advocacy further shaped by her subregional exposure to human rights issues in Southeast Asia and South Asia.

Anna Joceline Dizon Ituriaga is a 4th year Ph.D. candidate at National Chengchi University, passionately immersed in the realm of migration studies. Her research interests are wide-ranging and reflective of her commitment to advancing the comprehension of migration-related issues. These interests encompass Comparative Politics, Global Migration Governance, Care Migration, Social Policy in Southeast Asia, gendered migration, and International Relations. She believes that the interdisciplinary approach to migration studies is pivotal in addressing the complex challenges and opportunities faced by migrants worldwide. Her dissertation is entitled: "Filipinos on Demand: Feminization of Migration in Taiwan." This research delves deep into the multifaceted relationship between the state and Filipino migrant workers, dissecting how the state actively shapes and influences the dynamics of migrant labor through a gendered labor-brokering process. This investigation sheds light on the pivotal role played by the state in the production of migrant labor, with a particular focus on gender dynamics. The author can be contacted via email at 109265511@nccu.edu.tw and Ituriaga.anna@gmail.com

Jamil Ddamulira Mujuzi is a Professor of Law at the Faculty of Law, University of the Western Cape, South Africa. He has published over 200 articles and chapters in books on criminal law, criminal justice, and human rights issues. Some of his publications have been cited by the South African Constitutional Court, Supreme Court of Appeal, and the High Courts of South Africa and Uganda. The author may be reached by email at djmujuzi@gmail.com or jdmujuzi@uwc.ac.za.